

Cool Kitchen—Perfect Cooking

The housewife with years of experience—the woman who knows how to cook—finds, after practical tests and hard trials, the New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove is her idea of what a good cook-stove really ought to be. She finds it requires less attention, costs less to operate, and cooks all food better than any other stove she has ever tried. She finds the New Perfection oven bakes and roasts perfectly. The has a Cabinet Top with a shelf for keeping plates and food hot. There are drop shelves for coffee pot or saucepans, and nickel-plated racks. It has long turquoise-blue enamel chimneys. The nickel finish, with the bright blue of the chimneys, makes the stove ornamental and attractive. Made with 1, 2 and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner stoves can be had with or without Cabinet.

New Perfection Oil Cook-stove

CAUTIONARY NOTE: Be sure you get this stove—see that the name-plate reads "NEW PERFECTION." Every dealer everywhere, if not at yours, write for Descriptive Circular to the nearest agency of the

MONDAY EVENING, JUNE 13.

If you want a hard case here is the case of a man who late at night bought a bottle of whisky at a public house—price, 3s. 6d.—says the London Globe. He handed over a five pound note, and the publican would not change it. "All right," said the customer. "Give me the whisky and 10s. 6d. and keep my five pound note." Next morning the customer came in, plunked down four sovereigns and said, "Give me back my five pound note and we shall be straight." The publican and the stunner looked at each other. Can you tell at a glance which got the better of the bargain when the customer went away with his five pound note in his pocket? The question puzzled a whole office full of literary, financial, sporting, philosophical and editorial men—until it reached a girl of eighteen who is engaged in dealing with cash. All the rest were calculating on paper and reaching the result by devious ways. The cash girl saw it in a flash of the eye. Do you? Shut your eyes and do it in five seconds if you wish to beat the cash girl.

Wonderful Victoria Falls.
"It is well nigh impossible to describe a scene of such wonder, such wildness," says Lady Sarah Wilson in her "South African Memories" of the Victoria falls. But she gives this graphic description: "Standing on a point flush with the river before it makes its headlong leap, we gazed first on the swirling water losing itself in snowy spray which beat relentlessly on face and clothes while the great volume was noisily disappearing to unknown and terrifying depths. The sighter tries to look across, to strain his eyes and to see beyond that white mist which obscures everything, but it is an impossible task, and he can but guess the width of the falls, slightly horseshoe in shape, from the green trees which seem so far away on the opposite bank and are one constant sight of now and then as the wind causes the spray to lift. At the same time his attention is fixed by a new wonder—the much talked of rainbow. Never varying, never changing, that perfect shaped arc is surely more typical of eternity than anywhere else."

Curran and Lord Clare.
Curran, the Irish advocate, was on terms of intense enmity with Lord Clare, the Irish lord chancellor, with whom, as a member of the bar, he fought a duel and whose hostility to him on the bench, he always said, caused him losses in his professional income which he could not estimate at less than £30,000. The incidents attendant on this disagreement were at times ludicrous in the extreme. One day when it was known that Curran was to make an elaborate statement in chambers Lord Clare brought a large Newfoundland dog to the bench with him and during the progress of the most material part of the case began in full court to fondle the animal. Curran stopped at once. "Go on, go on, Mr. Curran," said Lord Clare. "Oh, I beg a thousand pardons, my lord! I really took it for granted that your lordship was engaged in consultation."

The Amen of Nature.
Do you ever wonder why poets talk so much about flowers? Did you ever hear of a poet who did not talk about flowers? Don't you think a poem which, for the sake of being original, should leave them out would be like those verses where the letter a or e or some other is omitted? No; they will bloom over and over again in poems as in the summer fields, to the end of time, always old and always new. Why should we be more shy of repeating ourselves than the spring be tired of blossoms or the night of stars? Look at nature. She never wearies of saying over her doral paternoster. In the crevices of cyclopean walls, in the dust where men lie, dust also; on the mounds that bury huge cities, still the Nemrod and the Babel heap, still the same sweet prayer and benediction. The amen of nature is always a flower.—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

The First Fork.
The first fork? The fork, as a matter of fact, did not appear as a table implement until the seventeenth century, though as early as the thirteenth century gold and silver ones were made for special purposes. The ordinary diner was only provided with a trencher, a napkin and a spoon. For knife he used his own, which he carried about, and, worse, there was no second trencher. When the several courses came along he exercised his ingenuity and mopped his trencher with his bread. His spoon—well, we ourselves lick postage stamps!—London Chronicle.

Comparing Notes.
Mrs. Slowboy—My husband's so lazy that if it wasn't for me I don't believe he would get up in time to go to bed. Mrs. Rounder—My husband's different. He scarcely goes to bed in time to get up.

The Thoughtful Man—What would you recommend as treatment for a man who is always going around with a poor mouth? The Funny Fellow—Send him to a dentist.

He Did.
"Did Simkins get any damages in that assault case?"
"Did he? My dear fellow, you ought to see his face."

A Nice Calculation.
Two very dear old ladies walked up to the window where tickets were to be sold for two popular concerts. They wanted tickets for both nights; but, alas, those for the second evening were all gone! This was the more popular entertainment of the two. "I'm so sorry, my dear," pattered one of the old ladies to the other. "We did want to go, didn't we, and we wanted to go both nights?"
"You couldn't give us two tickets for each night?" inquired the other of the clerk.
"No, ma'am."
"You haven't two seats anywhere for the second night?"
"No, ma'am. Couldn't give you nose room."
A great resolution beamed upon her gentle face.
"Then," said she firmly, "give me four tickets for the first night. We will make them do."
"Why, sister," quavered the other, "you're going to invite somebody?"
"No," said she, "but if we can't go both nights"—She paused, bewildered, quite out of her calculation. Then a happy thought struck her, and she added, "We'll go twice the first night."

The First Balloons.
The chemical philosophers have discovered a body which I have forgotten, but will inquire which dissolved by an acid emits a vapor lighter than the atmospheric air. This vapor is caught, among other means, by tying a bladder compressed upon the bottle in which the dissolution is performed. The vapor, rising, swells the bladder and fills it. The bladder is then tied and removed and another applied till as much of this light air is collected as is wanted. Then a large spherical case is made, and very large it must be, of the lightest matter that can be found, secured by some method like that of oiling silk against all passage of air. Into this are emptied all the bladders of light air, and if there is light air enough it mounts into the clouds upon the same principle as a bottle filled with water will sink in water, but a bottle filled with ether will float. It rises till it comes to air of equal tenacity with its own if on the way. Such, madam, is an air balloon.—From Dr. Johnson's Letter, Sept. 22, 1783, to Mrs. Thrale.

Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata."
The story runs that Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata"—always so called, though he so rarely gave a descriptive name to any of his works—was composed on an occasion when he had been playing to some stranger folk by chance. Walking with a friend, he overheard in a humble house some one playing with much feeling a bit of one of his sonatas. He paused to listen. In a moment the music ceased, and a girl spoke longingly of her wish to hear some really good concert. The voice was so appealing that the composer stepped without hesitation to the door and knocked. Admitted to the wondering host, he said, "I will play for you," and played wonderfully till the lamp burned out. Then with the moonlight filling the room he began to improvise—the mysterious delicate breathings of the beginning of that wonderful sonata, then the trickery of the second part, and the glory of the close.—Christian Science Monitor.

Long Words.
While our language does not contain such long words as are found in some other tongues nor so many words of unusual length, still we have several that are awkwardly long for conversational purposes. We have "philoprogenitiveness," with twenty letters; "interconvertibilities," with twenty-one; "intercommunicabilities," with twenty-two; "disproportionableness," with twenty-three; and "transubstantiationists" and "centralistindismissibility," each containing twenty-four letters. An effective little word is "syncretism," as it manages to compress eight syllables into seventeen letters.

Printers' Marks.
The interrogation mark or "point" (?) was originally a "q" and an "o" the latter placed under the former. They were simply the first and last letters of the Latin word "questio." So, too, with the sign of exclamation or interjection (!). In its original purity it was a combination of "i" and "o," the latter underneath, as in the question mark. The two stood for "io," the Latin exclamation of joy. The paragraph mark is a Greek "P," the initial of the word paragraph. The early printers employed a dagger to show that a word or sentence was objectionable and should be cut out.

A Silent Man.
Jenkins—There's Perkins—you know Perkins—entered into an agreement with his wife soon after their marriage, twenty years ago, that whenever either lost temper or stormed the other was to keep silence. Bold—and the scheme worked? Jenkins—Admirably. Perkins has kept silence for twenty years.

Take Your Choice.

She Repudiated the Charge.
At the men's service in a Yorkshire parish the vicar tried to convey the lesson that the truest heroes and heroines are those who do noble deeds in the secret corner of the home, where none can see or applaud.
"Few of you seem to think," he concluded, "that your wives staying at home uncomplainingly to mind the children and prepare the meals are heroines, and yet their touching devotion to duty proves them to be so."
It certainly hadn't struck one of the farmers in this way before, and as soon as he got home he promptly told his wife that the vicar had called her a heroine.
"Whatever does that mean?" asked the good lady.
"Oh, it means a woman who stays in 't' house instead of going out to show herself," explained the farmer vaguely.
"Then I'm not a heroine, am I?" I'll think 't' vicar to mind what he's saying," snapped the wife. "I go to his church as much as 't' other women do, an' he must be blind if he can't see me. Why, I'd give different colors in 't' bonnet I wore last Sunday!"—London Spectator.
